

I Want To Talk To Your Architect
By: Tom Girolamo

Does the new home or remodeling project you are about to build really fit your lifestyle? What about the new, unknown lifestyle challenges that we are all facing; higher oil prices, more congested roads, economic and political uncertainty and family health issues?

Sustainable landscapes that can fit and adapt to your lifestyle are on the cutting edge of research and practical application right now. There are huge gains that can be fitted into your project that include safety issues, health improvement, greater comfort, less maintenance and even production of energy right on your own property. These things are integrated into your building project instead of done as an after thought.